

Asia Dillard

Coleman/Zoller

10/23/18

ELA 7: 5th & 6th A/C

Just Law

To me, injustice means no equal rights and disrespect. The reason I picked disrespect and no equal rights is because a lot of people don't get the freedom they want nor the respect they want. I also think injustice is having a violent world because people and children are dying everyday because of drunk drivers, child abuse, gun violence too.

People shouldn't have to have the feeling to worry about what might happen to their child if he/she walk to the store. For an example if a black person is driving in a car and a white police officer pull them over, there is no need for the black american to be afraid of a white person. Also the cop has to have an excuse of why they pulled u over and if u already know its because of the color of your skin, they are going to make up a false excuse.

Another example, Michael Brown was a 18 year old black american was walking from his college class. He gets stopped by a policeman and tried to put Brown in the car but brown ran with his hands in the air. As brown ran the policeman fired shots at him and killed him.

That's called no equal rights when a black American can't walk down the street at all without getting a ugly look or harassed by a white person. There's many things that's injustice and i feel like child abuse is the main one. Bella Edwards was a 3-year old little girl who died from blunt force trauma to her abdomen. Law enforcement said Bella had injuries on her lower body that were consistent with physical and sexual abuse.

This is injustice! Some people can't even sleep due to all of the trauma they've witness. We need to take a stand and let all of the quiet voices we had inside to come out and tell everyone that's doing wrong to stop all the crimes, hurting of people, and child abuse cause its not doing nothing good but hurting more people. I say we take a stand on injustice. That's what injustice means to me!